Kia ora Te Papa team,

I'm a multidisciplinary designer with over 7 years of experience crafting immersive visual experiences across museums, games, AR/VR, and digital installations. I'm excited by the opportunity to bring that creative energy into Te Papa's exhibition design team.

While my background spans more than traditional print design, I've built a career around clarity, storytelling, and emotional connection, the same principles that underpin great exhibition graphics. I've collaborated with artists, developers, and spatial designers to create engaging content that speaks to diverse audiences. I've also worked directly on museum-based experiences, contributing to projects that required cultural sensitivity, community involvement, and accessible communication.

What draws me most to Te Papa is the chance to be part of an institution that embraces biculturalism and creative collaboration. I'm eager to apply and grow my skills in exhibition graphics from layout and labels to signage and visual systems, while bringing my strengths in interactive media, motion, and cross-disciplinary thinking to the table.

I value working in teams that are generous with ideas, committed to shared outcomes, and open to fresh perspectives. I'd love to contribute to Te Papa's vision, not only as a designer, but as a curious and adaptable collaborator with a deep respect for Aotearoa's cultural narratives.

Ngā mihi nui,
